ASKS FOR NEW TRIAL.

Imperial Tobacco Company Fighting Ouster Verdict.

Morganfield, Ky., March 4.—Judge J. T. Hanbery, of Hopkinsville, was here Monday to hear the arguments in the Imperial Tobacco Company's motion for a new trial of the anti-trust ouster suits. The hearing was held in the County Clerk's office, instead of open court, and lasted four hours.

Judge M. H. Yeaman, of Henderson, spoke for the company and Commonwealth's Attorney Sam Dixon for the State. The case will be taken to the Court of Appeals since the motion is denied.

Fines of $3,500 each were imposed last December against the Imperial Tobacco Company, Limited of England and Ireland, and the Imperial Tobacco Company of Kentucky. They were charged with being combinations in restraint of trade, and conviction carries a forfeiture of charters.

Purely Personal.

Upshaw Buckner, of Nashville, is here on business in court.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by Dr. J. C. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

NOT THE KIND HE WANTED

Governor Probably Meant Well, but Sam Was Not Highly Elated at the Gift

A trio of southerners was dining at the Raleigh. They were Governor-elect Henry C. Stuart of Virginia, Major Hemphill of South Carolina and Ed Smith of Texas. Whenever so many southerners get together there are sure to be some good stories told. One of them recited an anecdote of Governor Mann, chief executive of the Old Dominion.

"Governor Mann was driving through the streets of Richmond one afternoon not so long ago," he said. "It is the governor's custom to ride in an old-fashioned carriage driven by a typical southern Senegambian, with whom the governor is pleased to converse as he rides. The wind whistled through the curtains of the carriage, causing the governor to snuggle down under the robes, while the driver shivered and his teeth chattered. The vehicle drew up in front of one of Richmond's prominent hotels and Governor Mann alighted. He glanced at his negro driver, and observing the fellow shivering, said: 'You are cold, Sam; you need a little something to keep you from getting sick.'

"Thank you, boss," replied the negro. 'I is cold,' and as the governor disappeared into the portals of the hotel Sam had a mental picture of a big drink or rye or gin.

"Governor Mann reappeared and handed him a package. 'Here, Sam,' he said, 'take this and you will not get cold.'

"Sam's jaws dropped. The package contained three quinine capsules."—Washington Post.

HELD THE RIGHT OF WAY

Impatient Man in Automobile Had to Climb Around Determined Woman in Buggy.

The man in the motor car reached the foot of a long hill that was not easy to climb. He started up at a merry clip, for he had already increased the speed of his machine to take the incline with a rush. Halfway up the hill a shabby, dilapidated buggy was toiling along, its occupants apparently oblivious of the chugging monster approaching so swiftly from the rear. "Honk! Honk! Honk! Honk! Ho-o-o-o-nk!" The buggy kept in the middle of the road, drawn slowly by a rawboned horse. "Honk! Honk! Honk!" short and sharp and angry was the tone of the horn this time. The occupants of the buggy could not be seen, but they were evidently determined not to turn out.

The road was narrow. No time was to be lost. Once more the automobile snorted. "Honk! Honk! Honk! Honk!" No thoroughfare! Mad through and through, the motorist slowed his machine down, and as he carefully wormed his way around the shabby buggy, he said: "I'll bet anything a woman is driving that outfit!" Sure enough, a hard-featured dame was sitting in the buggy, holding the reins, and by her side were two children. In her flashing eyes there was a look which seemed to say: "Run me down, if you dare."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A CENTURY AGO.

One hundred years ago the Sicilians inhabiting the villages in the vicinity of Mount Etna, and who at the time were probably preparing for the joyous Christmas celebrations, were thrown into a panic by seeing signs of a renewal of activity in the historic volcano. Great clouds of steam and smoke arose from the summit, while streams of lava began to roll down the sides of the mountain. Fortunately, however, the eruption did not prove to be so disastrous as others in the history of this famous volcano, which the ancients called the pillar of heaven, and where the fabled forges of Cyclops were supposed to be located. Eruptions of Mount Etna were recorded long before the Christian era and have continued at intervals ever since. One of the most violent occurred in the twelfth century, when 15,000 persons perished.

ADMIRATION.

"What beautiful jewelry your wife has!"

"Huh!" exclaimed Mr. Cumrox, proudly. "What you saw isn't much. When she puts on her entire collection and sits in a well-lighted opera house she looks like a human Christmas tree."

"Brill!"

CASE GOES TO HIGHER COURT

Special Judge Hanbery Overrules Motion For New Trial.

IN IMPERIAL COMPANY CASE

The Court Says He Believes Companies Had Trade Agreement to Depress Prices.

Morganfield, Ky., March 3.—"It is the court's opinion, after thoroughly reviewing the record and hearing the arguments, that there is no error in the record, and the motion for a new trial asked by defendants is overruled," said Special Judge J. T. Hanbery in closing his oral opinion after nearly four hours of arguments on the motion for a new trial in the Imperial Tobacco case here Monday.

Immediately after the decision Judge Hanbery signed the transcript of evidence and the case will go to the court of appeals at once.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Frankel have returned from New York.

Young Drummer Fined.

Cincinnati, March 4.—Charles B. House, aged 23, a traveling salesman of Louisville, Ky., pleaded guilty before Juvenile Judge Gorman to having contributed to the delinquency of sixteen-year-old Mildred Crane, whose accusations have led six men and one woman to plead guilty to like charges, among them being Brent Arnold, of the Louisville & Nashville railroad. House was fined $100 and costs. Two others, Hugo Goldsmith and Isaac Newton Fox, prominent business men of this city, were each fined $400 on their plea of guilty to like charges. Judge Gorman declared House made a good impression on him and gave him three months in which to pay the fine.
